STATEMENT OF OBJECTS AND REASONS

The Additional Emoluments (Compulsory Deposit) Act, 1974, is one of the legislative measures which was enacted with a view to protecting the real incomes of industrial workers and salaried employees who were worst hit by the rise in prices. It provided, amongst others, for the impounding of one-half of the increases in dearness allowance. The objective of arresting the price spiral has been substantially achieved. But the need for controlling the expansion in money supply to consolidate the gains towards stability continues. The Bill, therefore, proposes that the period for deductions of additional dearness allowance, which is due to cease on the 6th day of July, 1976, should be continued for one year more.

While the additional dearness allowance deducted up to June, 1976 will be repaid in the manner provided in the Act, the deductions made from July, 1976 will be repaid in five equal annual instalments by crediting each such instalment to the provident fund account of the employee. Interest will be paid on the amounts so deducted at the same rate, that is, 2½ per cent. above the maximum bank deposit rates, as for the amounts deducted up to June, 1976, so long as such amounts remain in the Deposit Account. For the amounts credited to the provident fund, the employer will not be required to pay any matching contributions. In the case of an employee who does not subscribe to any provident fund, the amount deducted from July, 1976 onwards will be repaid to him in cash in five equal annual instalments.

NEW DELHI;

C. SUBRAMANIAM.

The 15th April, 1976.

FINANCIAL MEMORANDUM

Clause 3 of the Bill provides for the repayment, in five equal annual instalments of the additional dearness allowance which is impounded under the provisions of the Act, as proposed to be amended by the Bill. According to the said clause, read with section 7 of the Additional Emoluments (Compulsory Deposit) Act, 1974, interest shall be payable on each instalment of dearness allowance, impounded after the 30th day of June, 1976, at a rate which shall be two and half per cent. over and above the maximum bank deposit rate.

The total deposits from impounding one-half of the additional dearness allowance during the period specified above cannot be estimated at this stage because dearness allowance is linked generally to the cost of living index and variations in the cost of living indices in future periods cannot be assessed now, more so, because of the declining price trend now evident. Since the volume of such deposits cannot now be quantified, the actual interest liability cannot also be estimated. However for every Rs. 100 crores compulsorily deposited over a period of one year, the interest liability with reference to the current bank deposit rate will be about Rs. 44 crores. These interest payments will be spread over five years from 1978-79 to 1982-83.

At present, the total cost of strengthening the administrative machinery of the Central Government and other agencies, like the Employees' Provident Fund Organisation, for effective enforcement of the provisions of the Act, is estimated at around Rs. 4 crores. Because of the amendment proposed in the Bill, the administrative machinery, earmarked for the above purpose, will have to be continued for a longer period. The cost involved in such continuance is likely to be around Rs. 2.5 crores recurring.

The Bill, if enacted, will not involve any other recurring or non-recurring expenditure.
